GROWING

With this issue of Bar Briefs the State Bar Association starts on a cooperative arrangement with the University Law School for the publication, every three months, of an enlarged and more pretentious journal. The arrangement is purely tentative and experimental. It covers only the period that will carry up to the next annual meeting of the Association.

Bar Briefs, notwithstanding this arrangement, will remain a monthly publication, and will, to all intents and purposes, be the publication of the State Bar Association. The contribution of the Law School will extend, during this period, to the preparation of copy for the additional forty pages for the enlarged issues and for such space in the other issues as may be available or our funds permit of addition.

By the time the next meeting of the Association comes upon us, the members of the Association will have had full opportunity to consider the advantages or disadvantages of such an arrangement and be in position to pass upon such questions as change of name, readjustment or change in control, substitution of a quarterly for a monthly publication, and so forth. In the meantime free expression of opinion will be welcomed by the Secretary.
